Multi-genre writer Shelley A. Leedah returns to her home province with her latest book, The Moon Watched It All (Red Deer Press). Like her award-winning book The Bone Talker, Leedah's new title is both poetic and timeless. The story celebrates a surprising friendship between an outcast boy and an old woman who talks to the moon.

Beautifully illustrated by Aino Anto, this enchanting tale's an ode to the extraordinary power of human connection.

"Written in richly allusive, atmospheric prose that will keep lovers of words pinned to the page ... " -Kirkus Reviews

Leedah grew up in several small SK towns and raised her family in Saskatoon. Aside from her own literary endeavours, she writes dozens of book reviews each year, works as an editor, and freelances for a variety of commercial markets. Her poetry, fiction, and essays have frequently been anthologized. Previous titles include I Wasn't Always Like This (essays), Listen, Honey (short stories), and Wretched Beast (poetry). She now lives and writes in Ladysmith on Vancouver Island.
